Admin/Biographical History: The period of the Second World War 1939 – 1945, was known in Ireland as 'The Emergency'. In response to the crisis the government introduced a series of measures. With invasion by Germany a very real concern, priority was given to the expansion of numbers in the defence forces and the formation of local security forces. The Volunteer Reserve that was originally established in 1929 was renamed the Local Security Force (LSF) in June 1940. Its authority came from the Emergency Powers Order, 1939, which described the LSF as a 'Temporary Special Police Force'. It operated nationwide as a police auxiliary made up of volunteers reporting to An Garda Síochána. The LSF consisted of several service groups including Intelligence & Organisation, Communications, Transport, Engineers, Supply, First Aid and a Combat Group. However, within three months of its establishment, the majority of its 180,000 strong membership requested to serve with the Combat Group so that by January 1941 the LSF's larger than anticipated Combat Group came under the control of the Defence Forces or army, becoming known as the Local Defence Force (LDF). This ensured that proper training could be given to all its members. The LDF was organised into Rifle Battalions, commanded by Army Officers. In 1946, it was reorganised again under the title An Fórsa Cosanta Áitiúil or FCA (the Local Defence Forces).

In Dundalk the Local Security Force was founded in 1940. As the LSF was organised in groups based around Garda stations, there were two groups in Dundalk: one based at Anne Street; and a second based at Bridge Street. Dundalk LSF was involved in a variety of activities. The LSF did not have the power of arrest, however, recruits undertook patrols and watch duties and were trained in gun practice and first aid. They dealt with extraordinary events including a bombing of the Greenore railway in 1941 and a plane crash at Dromad in 1944. An air-raid shelter was built under Market House in Dundalk while a Control Centre was set up in the basement of the Town Hall, chosen because it had very strong overhead protection (being a 3 foot thick vault under the foyer).

The Dundalk force co-ordinated their activities with other LDF in the area: Carlingford, Blackrock and Omeath. This fostered camaraderie and a sense of common purpose. The LSF and LDF were also involved with social and cultural events in the area. Dinner dances raised funds for the Red Cross and other voluntary organisations. A significant number of the population became involved in the defence groups thus fostering a strong community spirit and during the early 1940s, 'Step Together Parades' were organised where the various auxiliary services (LSF, LDF, Order of Malta, Red Cross and the Maritime Inscription) paraded through Dundalk, led by the Emmet Brass Band and dances and a football match were held. Frank Aiken, Minister for the Coordination of Defensive Measures (1939-45) reviewed the North Louth Local Security Force at the Market Square in 1940 and again visited a Step Together Parade in Dundalk in 1943.

Of the two Dundalk units the 2nd Company ('B' Staff) met at Anne Street. Among its members were the brothers Oliver and Peter McCourt; Danny Goodfellow and Dermot Gaynor. A photograph in Louth County Archives (reference PP00272/003/002/005) shows some of the aforementioned being inspected in the Market Square by Frank Aiken, Minister for Defence in 1940/1941. Membership of the LSF committee during the years 1940-1944 included: John Maguire (chair), Michael Spillane, Frank Donnellan, John Cosgrove, Patrick Murphy, Peter Downes and Philip Smyth.
